READING COMPREHENSION

LONDON'S MARKETS

Street markets are fun to visit although you don't want to buy anything. Many of London's street markets have existed since 1600s or earlier and sell everything from flowers and fruits to books and furniture. There are local markets in almost every part of London. Many of them are only open on some days of the week. Here are a few of the most famous ones.

Covent Garden

In the past this area was called Convent Garden because in the Middle Ages the land was part of the gardens of a convent. The monks cultivated there their food. In 1670, it became a fruit and vegetable market. In the 1970s, the fruit and vegetable sellers moved to another part of the city and Covent Garden became full of shops which sell: clothes, jewellery, toys or souvenirs. Shops are open 7 days a week.

Camden Lock and Camden Stables Market

These two markets are young and very popular markets that started in the 1970s. They sell clothes of all sorts, from the latest street fashions to vintage clothes, jewellery, leather, books, records, crafts and antiques.
The best time to go is at weekends, where there are street performers and lots of small shops selling delicious food.

Portobello Road

This long street goes from Notting Hill Gate to Landbroke Grove. Along the street, the shops change from antiques and jewellery to fruit, vegetables and other foods and then to second-hand clothes, music, street fashion ... Shops are open during the week but some stands are only there on Saturdays.
